

Supplemental Statement
Diego Rodriguez

During the course abroad in Greece, I will be working alongside the professor and senior member of SITIO as a general assistant. I will make sure that traveling and accommodation logistics are executed as planned by myself, helping the professor keep the time schedule for site visits, check-in and transportation appointments. I will be overseeing this sort of planning. I will also be conducting sections of in site lectures on topics around traditional and contemporary forms of local visual arts and philosophy concerning the specific site and broader historical context concerning it. For this I am conducting research and preparations leading up to the academic trip. I will be working with the professor in Puerto Rico to prepare a seamless course plan where I can contribute through presentations and critiques.

Besides these two functions as logistics manager and teaching assistant, once we get to Kea I will be the main guide and will be helping out with the preparations for the „as-built“ of the small property made available to us, which will be used for the student’s final project. This includes taking the space’s measurements, working out the dimensions, drawing preliminary plans and clearing out the space so the students can have access to it for their design proposals. I will talk to the students about Kea, local artisanship, regional methods of construction in the Greek islands and furniture design. I will make a presentation on micro-architecture where these topics will come together regarding the small property. After design proposals are submitted I will participate in the final project critique.
